Model access policy
NHS improvement has published Elective care: model access policy. This document provides guidance and support for the production of elective access policies. The policy aims to ensure all patients requiring access to outpatient appointments, diagnostics and elective inpatient or day-case treatment are managed in line with national waiting time standards and the NHS Constitution. The policy should not be copied and pasted verbatim as there are elements in it which require reviewing and amending to reflect local arrangements.

Experiences of domiciliary care
Healthwatch has published Home care: what people told Healthwatch about their experiences. This report analyses the experiences of over 3,000 people, their families and front line staff with home care services. The information is intended to be used to inform the development of new service contracts, to shape care packages around what people want and to set out new ways to monitor performance from a user perspective.

Primary Care Home model: evaluation
The Nuffield Trust has published Primary Care Home: evaluating a new model of primary care. The Primary Care Home (PCH) model seeks to join up staff from different organisations to deliver joined up care for groups of 30,000 to 50,000 patients. This evaluation report looks at how sites can make early progress with implementing and evaluating their local PCH models, examines what might stand in the way of change and offers a number of broader lessons for the NHS as a whole.

Developing accountable care systems
The King’s Fund has published Developing accountable care systems: lessons from Canterbury, New Zealand. This report examines how the Canterbury health system in New Zealand has moderated demand for hospital care, particularly among older people, by investing in alternative models of provision and community-based services. The transformation has taken more than a decade and required significant investment; this report considers the lessons that the NHS can learn.

Variation in access to healthcare
The Medical Technology Group has published The north–south NHS divide: how where you are not what you need dictates your care. This report examines CCG indicators to find how effective CCGs are at giving patients access to medical technology. Providing each CCG with a grading based on how they scored in comparison to other CCGs, the report finds wide variation in access between the north and south of England and argues that CCG performance against access indicators should be clearer to patients.

New PRSB standards for digital outpatient letters
New PRSB standards for digital outpatient letters allow clinical information to be recorded, exchanged and accessed consistently across care settings.
These standards will improve continuity of care by helping clinicians to communicate relevant information more quickly, reducing transcription errors by enabling re-use of key data in the GP system and producing better information for audit and research by carrying information in coded format, where appropriate.
The PRSB is publishing the outpatient letter standards in draft form while it undergoes endorsement by our relevant member organisations.

Engage Your Brain: GCBH Recommendations on Cognitively Stimulating Activities
This report published by Global Council on Brain Health and Age UK finds that the long-term benefits of doing puzzles and mind games has little to non-existent. The report goes on to make recommendations of alternative activities that may be more effective such as learning a language, practicing tai-chi, taking photography classes and investigating your genealogy. It also highlights the importance of physical activities and activities that include social engagement as part of these activities, such as dancing or tennis or volunteering and mentoring others in your community.

Improving services using the Friends and Family Test
The Department of Health commissioned the Policy Innovation Research Unit (PIRU) to investigate whether and how the Friends and Family Test (FFT) contributes to the improvement of services in general practice. The report concludes that if a single item instrument, for example the FFT, is to be used to stimulate quality improvement in general practice, its impact could be improved in four ways by: enhancing the general capacity for managing quality in practices; changing the content of the FFT; improving practice staff understanding of the purpose of FFT; and altering national reporting requirements.

Views and experiences of children in care
The National Children’s Bureau in conjunction with Research in Practice has published A rapid review of sources of evidence on the views, experiences and perceptions of children in care and care leavers. The purpose of this report commissioned by the Children’s Commissioner was to access the feasibility of using existing sources of evidence for a future State of the Nation report on the views and experiences of children in care and care leavers in England. In recent years, policy makers have become increasingly aware of the need to hear directly from children in care. Government, local authorities, and advocates all agree that the young person’s voice should be central to decisions about service design as well as individual care planning.

Vulnerable children
Action for Children has published Revolving door: part one are vulnerable children being overlooked? This report examined whether children who are vulnerable but don’t meet the criteria for statutory support, were directed to early help services that could help them and their families. It highlights that opportunities to intervene early are being missed and that some children are stuck in a cycle of referral and assessment.

Mental health commissioning
Rethink Mental Health Illness has published Progress through partnership: involvement of people with lived experience of mental illness in CCG commissioning. This report summarises responses from a Freedom of Information request to identify the extent to which a co-production approach has so far been used or intended to be used by CCGs in mental health commissioning. It indicates that 15% of CCGs who responded had used a co-production approach at least once in mental health commissioning. The report includes examples of CCGs involving people in the design of services and makes recommendations to both NHS England and CCGs.

Coping with the psychological effects of illness: strategies to manage anxiety and depression
by Fran Smith et al

Focus on illness-related anxiety and depression. Whether it concerns cancer, heart disease, diabetes, or a mental health condition, sudden severe illness comes as a shock and challenges confidence and self-image. This book explores the common psychological issues that arise when someone’s usual health and routine are disrupted, and discusses the impact of illness on relationships and family. Drawing on CBT techniques, it offers practical self-help strategies to help deal with changed expectations and lifestyles.

Topics include:
- Anxiety and depression
- Insomnia, discomfort and pain
- Working with health professionals
- Dealing with the side effects of medication
- Relaxation
- Getting support
